Cullings From the State Capital.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., March 9th, 1885.

Ed. Register.—The past week has been an active as well as an interesting and exciting one at the Capital.

The Legislature is now getting down to hard work, and business is being dispensed with at a lively rate. About 750 bills have been introduced, up to this date, in the House, and nearly, if not quite, half that number in the Senate; and in order to "clean up the slate" within a reasonable time—not, however, at the expiration of the 70 days—three sessions a day are now being held. It is thought it will be possible to get matters in shape for adjournment by the 23d inst.

The members are becoming restless, and it will be difficult to hold a quorum after the seventy days have gone glimmering. From the present outlook, we will be here at least a month yet. Arrangements are being made for a trip to New Orleans, to "take in" the World's Fair, and the fact might hurry an adjournment, "which is very foolish," in my mind, for the law makers to entertain such a thing.

Thursday afternoon Steele's joint and concurrent resolution to submit to the qualified voters of the State at the next general election, the proposition to remove the State Capital to Sedalia, in 1890, came up in the House, and was defeated by a vote of 67 to 59.

The resolution was introduced for that day, and it was generally expected that it would be acted upon; so the lobby was crowded with interested spectators, mostly Jeffersonians, with a considerable number of Sedalians and others. Many of Jefferson's ladies were among the spectators, and most members of the Senate. The resolution came up at 2 o'clock P. M., and was exhaustively and ably argued by both sides. Messrs. Thurmond, Wells, Kellogg, Alexander, Gunn, and Farris, of Ray, were opposed to letting the people say where they wanted their Capital located, while Messrs. Loring, Teel, Storts, Carter, Savage, Hollis, Moore, of Laclede, and Steele, of Pettis, favored the submission. While the people of Jefferson had considered the matter more in the light of a joke, than otherwise, it was plain to be seen by the unusual number of property-holders present on this occasion, that some doubt was entertained, and the vote rolled up with the above result. The real sentiment of the Legislature is in favor of the Capital removal. This only settles the question for at least two years, this being the fourth attempt, and it would have passed if there had been a full House.

Johnson's railroad bill, giving additional powers to railroad Commissioners, and regulating freight and passenger rates, occasioned quite a skirmish in the House Friday. Mr. Curtis, the recognized champion of the railroads, strongly opposed the bill, and was joined in his opposition by several influential members, while Johnson
